

RSVP introduces Special Limited Time Offer for Members of the Emergency Services and the Armed Forces

Here at RSVP, we know that members of our Emergency Services and Armed Forces frequently work unsociable hours and shifts, making it especially difficult to meet other single people. So, we've introduced a special limited time offer to show our appreciation of the tough and unenviable work they do on all our behalf.

We already have many members who belong to these professions. And we'd love to have more, because we know our service is well-suited to the lifestyle chosen by these unique groups of professionals and our members are always very happy to meet them.

Our friendly, specially-trained Client Advisers meet all prospective members and they'll be as flexible as they can in scheduling appointment to fit in with the antisocial hours many of these professionals work.

And the offer is certainly worth having, with substantial discounts off our once-only lifetime registration fees.

RSVP is particularly appropriate for members of the Emergency Services and Armed Forces because all our memberships are lifetime memberships; so if a member gets posted away from home or gets very busy at work, they can pause their membership and resume when they return, without paying for or losing any benefits whilst they're away.

The offer is open to all members of the Armed Forces, Police and Fire Services; also field-based paramedics and ambulance crews who undertake an emergency response role.

Our usual terms and conditions of membership apply. Offer ends 24 December 2008.
